

Leads U. S. Legation to Safety

New Delhi India, Nov. 1 (UP) — Robert Dreesen, 29, of St. Louis, Mo., described today how he led an American legation staff from remote Sinkiang province in China across the forbidding Himalayas to safety.

Dreesen said grimly that his party of 11, white Russian and Chinese employees was never in danger of losing the trail. He said they just followed the whitened skeletons of horses, camels, ponies and humans killed by exhaustion and cold in the mountains and glaciers.

The American legation was forced to leave Tihwa capital of Sinkiang after the communists refused permission for American planes to land at Tihwa.

The American vice-consul remained behind in Sinkiang. He is Douglas MacKernan of Stoughton, Mass.

Dreesen's party crossed the Himalayas to Kashmir province where an American plane picked them up.

Four other members of the legation trekked out in a separate party. They are now waiting at Leh, capital of the mountain state of Ladakh, waiting for baggage to catch up. Included in this party are Consul General J. Hall Paxton of Danville, Va., and his wife.

Dreesen said 17 of the group's 49 horses and donkeys died during the trip. Three of the animals plunged off an icy precipice as they trekked across the treacherous Khardung glacier near Leh. Dreesen said that was the worst part of the trip.

Most of the other animals died of exhaustion while the party, bundled in thick Mongolian furs, fought its way over 18,000-foot Karakoram peaks with the temperature zero and a blizzard raging.

Although there were six Chinese children in the group there were no injuries and no one apparently suffered any ill effects. They existed on rice, corned beef and mutton.

Sherman Takes Oath as Top Navy Officer

Washington, Nov. 2 — (AP) — A shake-up springing from the military policy row and aiming at harmony in the high command put Vice Admiral Forrest P. Sherman in as top officer of the navy today.

It was too early to tell whether the replacement by Sherman of the ousted Admiral Louis E. Denfeld would bring a smooth and easy teamwork to the top level job of working out the strategy for war.

Sherman and Denfeld met for 15 minutes early this morning with the Secretary of Navy Matthews at the Pentagon.

Presumably, Matthews called in Denfeld to formally notify him of his removal as chief of naval operations. Aides said he had not been told officially he was out. He had reported as usual at his old office today.

There also was a possibility that Denfeld told Matthews whether he intended to retire or take a new navy assignment.

He and Sherman left Matthews' office, smiling and chatting amiably. They went down the hall, entered the office marked "Chief of Naval Operations" and shut the door.

It wasn't until late yesterday that the White House announced President Truman had tapped Sherman to become, at 53, the youngest chief of naval operations in history. And the formal commissioning was held over until today.

But Sherman was one of the original architects for the armed services unification plan. And he told reporters after his new appointment came through:

He still is 100 per cent for unification, expects no difficulty in getting along with other members of the policy-making joint chiefs of staff and is "sure the navy will give me the support and loyalty they have given all my predecessors."

Yet within the navy and congress there still is a certain bitterness over the ousting of Denfeld and over the way the whole defense set up is working.

Judge Declines to Revoke Permit

Little Rock, Nov. 1 — (UP) — Pulaski Chancellor Frank Dodge today refused to cancel an export liquor permit granted to the Sun Export company of Lake Village, Ark.

Following a short hearing the judge held that Revenue Commissioner Dean R. Morley could not arbitrarily take up the license so long as the firm obeyed the spirit of the export law as passed by the 1948 general assembly.

The chancellor condemned the export law as being a "very un-islamic and vicious piece of legislation." And he added, "I'd be as happy as anybody to see the law off the statute books, but I don't think I have the right to legislate it off."

Dodge in effect, ruled that an export firm can ship whiskey into Mississippi — where such shipments are permitted by state and federal law — but cannot ship into dry Oklahoma.

"There is no doubt but what sales into Oklahoma would violate the Oklahoma and the federal law," the chancellor said. Morley earlier cancelled permits of export operators selling in Oklahoma but said today that he expected the same parties to file applications for permits to operate from the eastern side of the state — probably West Memphis.

Judge Dodge brushed off Morley's contention that liquor sold in Mississippi would be re-sold to Oklahoma but told him that he could revoke the license if and when that happened. He also discounted the possibility that Morley would be indicted by a federal grand jury.

road to another ranch house as Pio sent two blasts from his shotgun screaming over her head.

J. L. Newey, a rancher, whisked her to safety. Then he strapped on his gun and called the sheriff's office.

Meanwhile, Pio got into his car and drove to the adjoining Grace ranch where Abaya had a cabin.

Abaya apparently was in bed reading when Pio knocked at his door. He was clad only in shorts and an undershirt.

Pio leveled his gun and fired at Abaya. In a neighboring cabin, another ranchhand, Felix Dalmacio heard the shots and came to the door.

Christmas Gift — Roses will soon be gone in Hempstead county so gather rose petals now to make rose jars or pot pourri bags for the different Christmas gifts, suggest home demonstration agent, Lorraine Blackwood.

For the old fashioned pot pourri — commonly called a rose jar, it takes quantities of rose petals. Spread the petals out in a dark place to cure. Turn them several times during the curing process.

For one and one-half gallons of dried petals, make the following mixture: one-half oz. orris root, 1 teaspoon oil of cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoon eucalyptus and one-half oz. orange or carnation sachet. Blend well with the rose petals.

Place in a tightly covered jar and let stand four to six weeks.

Placed in covered pottery or glass jars, these perfumed petals make very attractive Christmas gifts.

Five-inch squares of net or nylon five-incher squares of net or nylon curtain scrim. Place about one-half cup of perfumed petals in the center of each. Bring corners together and tie with attractive ribbons.

Socialist Rule Gets Some Encouragement From the Slender Confidence Vote

By DeWITT MacKENZIE
AP Foreign Analyst

Britain's socialist government, having received a vote of confidence from its big majority in the House of Commons, is free to continue its struggle with the economic crisis which is tearing at the vitals of the nation.

That affords some moral encouragement to the harassed cabinet, depleted. She hasn't the wherewithal for a quick recovery. That is why Sir Stafford warned the country that it couldn't exist on the charity of the United States, said he.

"At the root of our success or failure lies our own capacity to produce. The only real solution for our difficulties is more and more economical and efficient production."

One drag on Britain's recovery rests in the fact that much of the rest of Europe also is hard hit. Numerous countries are just about living on the Marshall plan which is slated to expire in 1952.

In addition to increasing production the government is taking other measures to conserve resources. The budget is to be slashed $784,000,000 and another $400,000,000 is to be cut off dollar imports. Loans and credits to other countries are to be restricted.

The government also will make it difficult for people to sell in the so-called sterling area, thus forcing them to sell in the dollar area to gain the dollars, which are needed badly for the purchase of supplies in the United States.

In this connection it is noted that about 26 per cent of British exports have been going abroad against sterling credits. This operation is to be stopped so that these exports will go to the dollar area.

Present indications are that the government isn't going to let itself be stampeded into a general election but will carry on and try to secure an economic improvement before next summer when an election normally will be due.

In trying to figure what would happen if a general election were held now, some political experts confess themselves at a loss. They say that the independent voter, who will swing the balance, is confused and undecided because of the gravity of the economic crisis.

Therefore the calling of an immediate election would be gambling on an unknown quantity. This the government's present plan is to hang on and see if it can't improve conditions before asking the country to vote.

should Arkansas-stamped liquor be found in Oklahoma.

The judge expressed the opinion into session — would immediately repeal the export law. However, he added, "I doubt if it is important enough for a special session of the general assembly."

He pointed out that the law was passed as a revenue-producing measure but added: "We've already shipped enough whiskey into Mississippi and Oklahoma to debauch all of the people. And it has hardly produced enough revenue to cover the cost of hanging."

Traffic to Claim 32,000 Persons Each Year

Chicago, Nov. 2 — (UP) — About 32,000 persons will be killed each year in traffic unless "new incentives" can be found to make people more cautious, the National Safety Council said today.

"It is now apparent," the council said in a statement, "that the steady reduction of the traffic

Master Lover Faces Jail Sentence

Chicago, Nov. 2 —(UP)—Sigmund Engel, self-styled master lover who charmed women for their cash, today faced a sentence of 10 years in prison.

After deliberating for only 63 minutes yesterday, a jury of six men and six women found the 37-year old Romeo guilty of fleecing a local widow of her life savings.

Engel's face was expressionless as verdict was read. But his victim, Mrs. Reseda Corrigan, 39, murmured her pleasure and promptly fainted.

While one bailiff rushed water to Mrs. Corrigan, others led Engel away, but not without protest. "I want to see my wife!" he shouted, "I want to see my lawyer!"

His attorneys immediately asked for a new trial. Judge George M. Fisher set Nov. 9 for a hearing on the appeal.

This automatically delayed sentencing of the white-haired Lathrop, who had confidently expected freedom and set up a script-writing business.

Engel had been free on $37,600 bail in seven swindling charges preferred against him by women from coast to coast. He will be required to post a $15,000 appeal bond to resume his freedom.

Consolation for the aging stealer of widows' hearts came from Mrs. Pauline "Polly" Langton, of New York, who, he says is the "one and only" true love of the four women he has married.

"I'll stick by him," Mrs. Langton said.

Personal Mention Friends will be happy to learn that Mrs. W. H. A. Schneider is reported much improved at her home.

By JAMES MARLOW Washington, Nov. 2 —(P)—The left-wingers are getting a mauling at the CIO convention in Cleveland.

But three years ago they opened the door for what's happening to them now.

The time was Nov. 18, 1946. The place: Atlantic City, N. J. The CIO was holding its conventions there at that time.

It was a couple of weeks after the 1946 election in which the Republicans had won control of congress from the Democrats.

This was the first time since 1932 that the Democrats who had befriended organized labor, had played second-fiddle to the Republicans.

The CIO didn't know what lay ahead and wanted to keep as much strength as it could.

Further, it needed strength because it was getting set to demand wage increases in 1947.

By November, 1946, strong anti-communist feeling had begun to build up in this country.

The CIO particularly had been singled out for criticism because of the activity of communists in some of its unions.

The criticism of CIO had grown so strong that the non-communist leaders in the CIO decided they had to do something.

At the same time they didn't want to split the CIO wide open by a left-wing fight. Not at that time.

DOROTHY DIX Wife Supports Husband

Dear Miss Dix: My husband and I are very happy together; that is, we would be if it were not for the financial question. For the last six months in prison.

Blevins

P. T. A. Carnival The Mystic Spirits of Halloween flitted about the Blevins community Monday night with attention centered on the large crowd of merry makers gathered at the school gym. Old and young were there to enjoy the fun and frolic.

The house was full. There were many booths set up to challenge the adventurous and the most exciting event was the contest for choosing the King and Queen. Each of the twelve classes in school had candidates. Tradition was upset when the freshmen group won over the juniors, the runners up. It was hard to tell if the Freshman excitement was surprise or joy.

The king, Dee Coffee. The queen, Patsy Samuel. Prince and princess, as first attendants to the king and queen, were chosen from the Elementary school. Gene Earl Jester and Jo Beth Nolen were awarded the honor. The fourth grade group really worked for their candidates.

The parsons of Blevins District No. 2 are school conscious, as evidenced by their action at the polls and their presence at the Carnival — plus the carnival take for $400. The PTA plans to spend this money for books and music for the school.

Mrs. R. D. Bonds, president extends thanks to all who helped in the carnival with their presence labor and dollars.

University of Arizona and Max Salsbury has won the heavyweight boxing championship three consecutive years.

which should be every citizen's business. As a member of the "cultural" clubs which import speakers and entertainers for the long winter evenings, Mrs. McCullough objected to the engagement of Draper and Adler by the local committee to them. She based her objection on published reports of the un-American activities committee of congress stating that these two had been members of or associated with communist fronts. The next thing she knew, Draper and Adler had slugged her with a suit for damages and, under a vicious Connecticut law, attached the McCulloughs' home and their property. There was less than $2,000 and mostly committed to outstanding checks, including a check for taxes. All of these were dishonored by the bank, because of the attachment.

Draper and Adler demanded $100,000 each. Although Greenwich has a dressy, high-suburban reputation, the McCulloughs are not well-to-do and have no wealthy family backing. There are mortgages on their home and their property has been to amortize, save and live toward the future. He is picture editor of Time magazine, having graduated from the job of newspaper copy editor. Dr. McCullough is a man of 31 but it doesn't make him a fat cat. Mrs. McCullough was a secretary when they met. They have a boy eight years old.

The Connecticut law which permits a creditor to take the property of the defendant to the full amount of his demand on the mere filing of a suit was unknown to most Connecticut residents until this case gave it loud publicity. In the past, the plaintiff must win judgment first. The McCulloughs can't unfreeze their bank account and if a buyer should turn up for their house, which has been on the market for some time, he would have to pay the balance of the mortgage because it is legally committed to Draper and Adler on a highly questionable and unadjudicated claim. They simply cannot afford the money to pay the balance of their home and their money in the bank. Even though Mrs. McCullough should win, the fact remains that, just for expressing an opinion as to the political views of the McCulloughs, she has been put in debt for life to pay the cost of victory. Draper and Adler might have been aware of this.

To date, thanks considerably to several essays by George Sokolsky, and the columnist, and, I hope, to some expressions by me, the McCulloughs have received in contributions a little more than $8,000. However, the McCulloughs have been in the neighborhood of Greenwich have given anything. A member of one of the richest families in the world said she would like to, but was afraid she would thereby expose herself to some liability which was transparent nonsense. However, a woman in Virginia unknown to the McCulloughs, sent $1,000 and a rich Philadelphia family, who had working girl, also sent $1,000. To the thousands of citizens who annually write me of their desire to do something, I earnestly recommend a donation of one dollar to Mrs. John McCullough, c/o Parsons, 400 Greenwich, Conn.

The McCulloughs now bank in New York state where his earnings and the defense fund are safe. Other residents of Connecticut have been conscious of the unspectacular risk of banking in Connecticut, or owning property there.

It is a pernicious fact that communists and fellow travelers enjoy to speculate Hawaii, from discussion of their political beliefs and activities by others.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr.

New York, Nov. 2 —(AP)—Major league farm bosses insist there is no "ceiling" on practical operations of baseball chains but you notice that a lot of clubs are cutting down to a limit of somewhere between ten and 15 affiliates. Beyond that the operation apparently becomes too expensive for the number of good players developed that a couple of money-making farms can carry a lot of the load.

On the other side, minor league clubs are complaining that most winter league agreements are unsatisfactory. Right now there are some 400 minor league clubs. If each big league club should limit itself to 15 farms, that would take care of 240 of them. Maybe the answer is that the winter leagues want baseball at present-day prices. If you can figure out what to do for them, you'll have a lot of fodder for hot stove discussions and probably nothing more.

All In The Act

Penn State's dramatic organization, The Thespians, has voted an honorary membership to Jim Dragotta, Syracuse end for "the greatest piece of dramatic acting ever seen on Beaver field."

Dragotta was named as the Syracuse game with the ball on the one yard line and only a few seconds left to play. Dragotta fell flat on his face and gave a notable performance of appearing injured.

That stoppage and gave Syracuse one more play for its final score. The Thespians should realize such things are necessary in football; it's only in amateur dramatic groups where you find genuine leaders whose faces would stop a clock.

Natchez, Miss., Nov. 2 —(UP)—Just as the town began rolling in to little Jefferson military college for its action in turning down a $50,000,000 endowment because of the strings attached, officials of the school said it will probably have to close because of financial difficulties.

Jefferson decided not to take the huge sum offered by Judge George Armstrong because he stipulated that the school would have to teach white supremacy in order to qualify for the gift.

In New Orleans last night, Methodist Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam of New York congratulated the academy for spurning Armstrong's offer. The Mississippi multi-millionaire's statement showed that he "either ignorant or deliberately 'false,'" the bishop said, adding that the council is on record with a strong condemnation of communism.

Meanwhile, trustees of Jefferson said a 147-year-old school has not present debts with $5,000 donated by a Texas businessman but will need more money to continue the current term.

Maj. Henry Risen, superintendent, said he had received stacks of letters about the controversial endowment offer, most of them uncomplicated. The school was first reported to have accepted Armstrong's conditional offer by two Atlanta newspapers, praised the college editorially for finally refusing the endowment.

According to Harding's story, the double killing took place after he and his wife had returned home from a Sunday evening movie. He said he awoke about 1 a. m. in a "cold sweat," fighting the urge to kill his wife whom he said had admitted infidelities.

Mrs. Mildred Compton Harding was the retired autographs manufacturer's third wife and was well-known in Toledo musical circles. Her husband, Fred Thompson, 70 lived with the couple and was killed Harding said when she came into the room after he had bludgeoned his wife to death.

Stymie, Who Rose From Ranks, Is Retired

New York, Nov. 2 —(UP)—Gallant old Stymie, who rose from the claiming ranks to become the world's greatest money-winning thoroughbred, was retired today to a bluegrass life of ease.

And thus was written the climax of a lusty saga of the turf. Bred on the sprawling King ranch in Texas, Stymie was just an obscure selling plater when he was purchased by Hirsch Jacobs in 1943 for $1,500. He was two years old then.

Now eight years old — and still under the guidance of Jacoby — Stymie leaves the racing scene with an amazing, almost unbelievable, bankroll of $818,485.

Nine Points Lost Texas Three Games

Austin, Tex., Nov. 2 —(AP)—Tel-e-scoped into 12 seconds was a season of broken dreams for Texas. Nine points kept the Longhorns out of the nation's football elite—nine points lost them games to three of the top teams of the country.

Two missed passes, a point after touchdown and a field goal pitched them into bitter reverie of what might have been.

Texas, starting the season with bright thoughts, rolled over three without getting up a sweat. Then came Oklahoma. The Longhorns bowed to the Sooners 14-20 when Ben Procter, great Texas Wingman, dropped a pass thrown squarely to him in the end zone.

Next, Texas put on a stirring last-half drive to beat Arkansas 27-14.

Then came Rice. The Owls battled back to win 17-15 in the last seconds of play on a field goal by Ernie Williams.

And last week there was Southern Methodist. In the last quarter Donk Walker came off the bench to kick point after touchdown, beat Texas 7-6. Again, Procter dropped a pass in the end zone as the big clock showed two seconds to go. Eight times Texas was in scoring territory and couldn't make it, once fumbling on the three-yard line.

In each of these three games they lost, the Longhorns held the edge in first downs and total offense.

Greenville Seeks to Keep Cotton League Club

Greenville, Miss., Nov. 2 —(AP)—Directors of the Greenville club in the Class C Cotton States baseball league are hunting for a purchaser who will keep the club in operation in Greenville.

The directors after operating the club at a loss for two seasons, said last night they hope to sell the club to a private operator, a major league club or a high ranking minor league club.

Greenville was a charter member of the Cotton States league and has been in the league during two periods since then. Except for the 1941-42 war lapse in the circuit, Greenville has been in the league continuously since 1934.

Charles Dean, a taxi driver, who was one of those who turned in the first alarm, said he was attracted to the scene by screams of women.

"I could see the fire," he said, "and see people at windows and all at once fire was blazing out of the second and third floor windows. I saw two people jump and I saw another man get to another building by walking around a ledge on an upper floor window."

"Someone probably saved his life because they shouted to him not to jump."

McNay expressed belief the fire was started by someone smoking in bed.

So quickly did the flames race through the brick building in the densely populated area that within two hours firemen were through with their work.

30 More Die in Columbia Violence

Bogota, Colombia, Nov. 2 —(UP)—The newspaper El Liberal reported today that 30 persons were killed in Cúcuta and the town in Boyaca province was razed in a new outbreak of political violence.

Other sources reported a battle was going on between residents of Bilieta and the nearby communities of Quebrada Negra and Sasaima, some 50 miles from Bogota. Troops in Bogota were reported alerted for possible intervention in the political riots which have caused hundreds of deaths in recent weeks.

These sources said the troops were concentrated in barracks in the city and officers were ordered to join their units. But minister of war Gen. Rafael Sanchez Amaya said "the country is quiet. There is no alarm at this time."

More than 100 additional deaths have been reported from scattered localities as the political violence forces apparently continued unchecked. The reports were based mostly on information from conservative and liberal newspapers. Liberal leaders said they planned an appeal to the United Nations on grounds that Conservative party officials in many sections were persecuting members of their party.

Of the 65 members of Alabama's football squad, nine are seniors, 24 are juniors and 32 are sophomores.

"Let me in, Arnold!" she rattled the knob rudely. "Hurry up!"

The Story: Martin Falter, a resident of the Doloresa art colony, has somehow come into possession of a valuable carnelian cameo. He visits a local collector Hagar Blair, a gift shop proprietor, and offers it for $12,000. Hagar cannot pay this but Stephanie Smith, Hagar's assistant, is very anxious that Hagar obtain it. Later Falter calls on Arnold Pfeffer, a weaver, and shows him the cameo.

Arnold Pfeffer whistled. He turned the brooch over, fingering it gently. "What do you want me to do with it?" he asked Martin Falter.

"I want you to take it to a prospective buyer I have in San Francisco. Ask him for $12,000, but if you have to take ten, I'll get a power of attorney notarized tonight and bring it over. Now let's see, I have his card somewhere."

Arnold, his lips pursed worriedly, watched Martin's search through his pockets. He gave a little cough.

"You know Marty, you're asking me to take a lot of responsibility. I wish you'd take it up yourself."

"I can't leave town right now. And, anyway, I'd rather not deal with this man in person."

"Why not?"

"Oh stop with the questions. Arnold — you fuss like an old woman. Now here," he extended a card, "here's the man's name and address and phone number. I know I can depend on you to get like the reputation you've built for yourself out West as a master weaver. You like the money it brings in, you like the pilgrimages to your door by artists and sight-seers. You'd hate to give it up and move away and begin again, wouldn't you?"

Arnold's face was white. Martin laughed. "Oh, don't look so petrified. It all boils down to this — you take the cameo to San Francisco for me, and we'll forget all about Baltimore."

Color shot back into Arnold's face, turning it a deep purple. He jumped to his feet and sprang at Martin raining futile blows on the bigger man's arms and chest. Martin struggled out of his chair grabbed Arnold's shoulders and held him at arm's length.

"Now, now, Arnold," he panted. "Temper temper!" Arnold kicked at him sobbing then turned and sank into a chair and buried his face in his hands. "You're despicable, Martin Falter!" he spat.

Martin shrugged. "But interesting," he amended. "At least no one could call me a milkop. Now, if you're over the little tantrum I'll give you the cameo. Put it away somewhere while I go out and see about getting that power of attorney. I probably won't get back here until around 9 or 10 this evening." He paused in the doorway. "Try a little lavender, Arnold. They'll give you vapors no end of a lift."

He laughed and was gone. Arnold, his head buzzing pushed back his chair and walked to the windows.

His thoughts centered on Martin, reviewing their friendship from its beginning on Doloresa's sun-baked beach one summer afternoon about two years ago.

Martin had been one of his first acquaintances. He had met him informally on the beach only because Martin's cigarette lighter hadn't worked. Arnold had given him a match. They had gotten on well and presently, Arnold had his art weaving. Arnold had become almost garrulous. But he'd been careful not to discuss his past life, careful not to mention anything that might lead to questions about Baltimore.

All of that Martin had somehow stumbled upon by himself. Arnold cringed as he stood at the window. Baltimore! That dreadful scandal.

He turned from the window and paced the room. He stopped once and fitted a cigarette into his holder. What Martin Falter had just said to him amounted to blackmail! Blackmail from a man he'd thought of as a friend.

Arnold suddenly despised himself for a fool. A naive fool, for confiding in Martin, making an intimate of him occasionally lending him money. And asking nothing, nothing whatsoever in return. Martin had spent a good deal of time together until Martin had got mixed up with that O'Neill woman. Blowy obvious creature

Neel had money, of course, and that would appeal to Marty. And he didn't even care that Neel's purse was filled by Tom her good-natured husband.

Martin's financial graph was a familiar one to Arnold. Way up and then, way down. During his prosperous interludes he would make vague and airy reference to having "disposed of a picture."

Though why, thought Arnold, anyone would pay money for one of Falter's pictures was a folly beyond understanding.

Up to now he had considered that if Martin wanted to pose as an artist and loaf out his days in Doloresa it was nobody's business — was, in fact, rather amusing. But today's events had thrown a different light on the matter.

He got up restlessly and walked over to the steel cabinet where he had locked up the cameo. He unlocked the drawer, took out the silver box and opened it. He stared for a long while at the small, twinkling diamonds, the smooth pale luster of the pearls and the exquisitely carved weeping woman on the carnelian.

He gave a nervous start as the knocker on his front door clacked a staccato summons. He hastily closed the drawer and locked the cabinet. It might be Martin returning maybe to tell him he should take the cameo to San Francisco after all.

He made for the hall, paused, then tiptoed swiftly down to the front door. Stealthily, he opened the Judas window a crack and peered out. Standing on his doorstep, big and brash as ever, was Neel O'Neill!

"Let me in, Arnold!" She rattled the knob rudely. "Hurry up!" Arnold slammed the window — he'd opened it too far. Neel had seen him! If he didn't let her in, would she bang on the door or cause some other kind of disturbance? Undoubtedly, she would. He released the lock.

Neel brushed past him and swept down the hall and into the studio. Arnold trotted after her. She took a brisk look around. "Where is he?"

"Who?"

"Don't be stupid! Martin Falter. I saw him come in here!"

"You should have kept your eye to the knothole — you'd have seen him leave."

"Did he say where he was going?"

"I didn't ask him. It was none of my business."

Neel gave him a scathing look. "Got a cigaret, little man?" She sank into one of the maple chairs. (To Be Continued)

Tough Gunman Surrenders Meekly

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 2 —(UP)—Gunman Jack Tatum, touted as one of the toughest outlaws in the Southwest, surrendered meekly when FBI agents seized him in downtown El Paso, government officials said today.

Tatum, who broke out of a Phoenix, Ariz., jail two weeks ago, was recognized on the street yesterday by an alert federal agent despite the fact that the bandit was thin from undernourishment.

The 28-year-old fugitive was unarmed. Warnings spread through southwestern states had urged officials to use extreme caution in attempting capture because he was "believed armed and dangerous."

He offered not the slightest resistance as he was arrested. Office workers hurried past him on the sidewalk, scarcely noticing the little drama in which one of the most hunted outlaws in the nation was returned to justice.

Tatum was neatly dressed but his pockets held only 20 cents. He admitted that he had been hungry almost continuously since the jailbreak.

Four other prisoners attempted to break loose with Tatum but two were killed by a courageous crippled watchman and two others were recaptured before they could get out of the Maricopa county courthouse.

Tatum said he spent four days and nights in a citrus grove near Phoenix, living solely on oranges and grapefruit.

Then he hopped a freight train, he said, for Tucson, Ariz., staying one day and night in a hobo camp. Last Sunday, he arrived in El Paso on a bus and checked into a second-rate hotel, registering as "Joe Parker."

The slogan was selected yesterday from 200 suggestions. It was submitted by Mrs. J. F. Underwood, local grandmother of several children and former president of the Tennessee State Fraternal congress.
